Academic Reading
[Overview and purpose of the course]
The objectives of this course are as follows: the active participation in the class will help students 1) to become competent readers of English who are able to grasp not only the outline but also the chief message(s) of the text; 2) to improve communication skills of English; 3) to acquire self-confidence necessary for them to read through substantial English texts, with the understanding that critical reading provides them with a powerful means for their intellectual explorations; 4) to expand their social, cultural and moral perspectives. The course encourages students to read through an authentic English fictional work. By fulfilling activities and tasks which the course requires, students will learn to grasp the plot, the characters, their situations and the theme(s) of the text, and express their ideas about the text in English. Students are encouraged to read and think a lot. The class begins with the understanding of the plot, the characters, their situations, and moves on to exploring the themes of the work.
[Course objectives]
Through learning to commit themselves to critical reading of the text, they are expected to improve not only reading skills but also overall communication skills of English--they will be able to acquire skills to grasp and respond to the text intellectually, organize their ideas and express them effectively in English. They are also expected to learn social,cultural and moral issues which the text addresses, and to apply their learning to their understanding of issues which their own society faces.
[Course schedule and contents)]
The class deals with Robert Louis Stevenson's Strange Case of Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde and his short fiction. One class discusses one to two chapters (about 10 pages). The focus of each class is on the plot(who appears and what happens in each chapter), the characters, their situations, and the themes which the text explores. A reading comprehension quiz is given at the beginning of each class: students are expected to complete the quiz and submit it to the instructor. The submitted worksheet is to be checked, marked and returned to them. Preparation for each class is required: students are expected to read assigned chapters prior to class, and be ready for in-class discussion. All class activities are to be conducted in English. Work Schedule: liable to some minor adjustments and changes (The numbers 1-16 at the beginning refer to the classes of the course.)

[Study outside of class (preparation and review)]

- 1) Students need to secure at least 2-3 hours per week for the preparation and review of each class. This means that students are expected to read the assigned pages and grasp the plot, the characters, and main points of the text before attending the class.
- 2) Please understand that preparation for class is absolutely necessary for effective learning. All class activities are to be done in English, and students are expected to be active participants in class discussions.
- 3) A reading comprehension quiz is given at the beginning of each class: students' commitment and general performance are largely judged by the achievement levels reflected in their responses to the quiz.
